The diagram consists of a large rectangle defined by a dashed blue border. In the center of this rectangle, there is a block of text in a light gray font. Four gray arrows point outwards from the text block towards the center of each side of the dashed border: one pointing up towards the top border, one pointing down towards the bottom border, one pointing left towards the left border, and one pointing right towards the right border. This visualizes the constraint that the text and other important elements must remain within the boundaries of the dashed line.
